

Investigating Soil Permeability

We've been learning all about rocks in our Science lessons. In today's experiment, we're learning all about soil! We looked at how soil is made from broken down rocks and organic matter before performing an experiment with different types of soil to find which is the most permeable. We found that a loamy soil containing clay, chalk, and sand is the best soil for holding water!